AMENDED¹ ORDER GRANTING IN PART AND DENYING IN PART
MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Re: ECF No. 80

In this action for claims under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, Defendants City of San Rafael, Twin Cities Police Authority, Officer Wanda Spaletta, and Officer Anthony Shaw, move for summary judgment. Plaintiffs have not opposed the motion. For the reasons set forth below, the motion is GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART.

I. BACKGROUND

A. The Parties and Claims

Plaintiffs Jose Hernandez, Alma Hernandez, Scott Hernandez, and Josh Hernandez, bring this action on their own behalf and as guardians ad litem for T.H., a minor, against Defendants the City of San Rafael (“the City”), Twin Cities Police Authority, (“TCPA”), City Officer Wanda Spaletta, TCPA Officer Anthony Shaw, the County of Marin (“the County”), and County Officer Keith Boyd for claims arising out of the arrests of Jose, Scott, and Josh Hernandez on July 4, 2010. Second Am. Compl. (“SAC”), ECF No. 40.

Plaintiffs assert the following claims against Defendants: (1) violations of California Civil Code Section 52.1; (2) violations of California Civil Code Section 51.7; (3) battery against Boyd and Shaw; (4) intentional infliction of emotional distress; (5) respondeat superior with respect to the City and the County only; (6) violations of their rights under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments in violation of 42 U.S.C. § 1983 against the individual officers only; (7) false arrest; and (8) conspiracy.²

B. Undisputed Facts

At the time of the July 4, 2010, arrests, Jose lived in San Rafael, California, with his two sons, Josh and Scott; his wife, Alma; and his daughter, T.H. Osman Decl., Ex. A, Jose Hernandez Dep. (“Jose Dep.”) at 31. On July 4, 2010, at approximately 9:30 a.m., Jose left his home in his Chevy pickup truck with his sons Josh and Scott with the intent of dropping off Josh at his place of employment in Corte Madera. Scott sat in the front passenger seat and Josh sat behind Scott in the back seat. Jose had recently had surgery on his knee and used a cane and a walker to assist him with walking. Jose put his walker in the bed of the truck and his cane in the cab of the truck before starting to drive. Jose Dep. at 26, 31, 59-62; Osman Decl., Ex. B, Scott Hernandez Dep. (“Scott Dep.”) at 23, 43-45; Osman Decl., Ex. C., Joshua Hernandez Dep. (“Josh Dep.”) at 7-8, 16-17, 48, 50, 52; Osman Decl., Ex. D, Alma Hernandez Dep. (“Alma Dep.”) at 12; Osman Decl., Ex. E, T.H. Dep. (“T.H. Dep.”) at 10, 65-68.

Before arriving at Josh’s place of employment, Jose rear-ended a Toyota Corolla at an intersection. After hitting the car, Jose exited his vehicle and approached the Corolla driver’s side window to exchange information with the driver. The driver of the Corolla and his passenger remained inside the car. The driver of the Corolla said something to Jose about the laws in California and then drove away before Jose gave him his insurance information. Jose Dep. at 64, 65-68, 72, 74; Scott Dep. at 48-57; Josh Dep. at 53-56.

Jose returned to his truck and resumed driving toward Corte Madera. He noticed the Corolla driving in front of him. The Corolla stopped in front of Jose’s vehicle at the next red light. When the light turned green, Jose passed the Corolla and eventually lost sight of it. Jose arrived at the Village shopping center in Corte Madera, the place where Josh worked, and dropped off Josh. Jose then started driving back to his house with Scott sitting in the passenger’s seat. Jose

² Plaintiffs bring claims against the individual officers both in their individual capacities and in their capacities as officers for the City and County. SAC ¶ 5.

1 Dep. at 70, 73-75, 79, 80, 84, 86-87; Scott Dep. at 53, 56, 58-64; Josh Dep. at 58, 61, 63.

2 At approximately 9:50 a.m., the driver of the Corolla, Emerson Reyes, contacted the San
3 Rafael Police Department and reported that he had just been involved in a shooting. Reyes
4 advised dispatch that three men in a gray Chevrolet pickup truck shot at him following a minor
5 traffic collision. Reyes also told dispatchers that the suspects fled southbound on Highway 101
6 and gave dispatchers the suspects' license plate number, which was registered to Jose Hernandez
7 at his home address. Casalnuovo Decl. ¶¶ 2-4, ECF No. 80.

8 City Officers Hornstein and Casalnuovo went to Jose's home and told Alma that they were 9 looking for Jose because he had shot at someone on the street. Alma told the officers that Jose left
10 their house a short time earlier and confirmed he was driving the gray Chevrolet pickup truck with 11 the license plate number reported by Reyes and that their son Josh was in the truck with him. She 12 confirmed that Jose was driving towards Corte Madera. Casalnuovo Declaration ¶ 6; Alma Dep.
13 at 29, 44-46; T.H. Dep. at 40-41, 45-47.

14 City dispatch advised officers over the radio that the Marin County Sheriff's Office had 15 located a possible match for Jose's truck in Corte Madera and that Sheriff's Deputies were 16 following it northbound on Highway 101. Casalnuovo Decl. ¶ 7. Officer Casalnuovo then saw
17 Jose driving directly in front of him and activated his emergency lights to make a "high-risk" stop
18 due to the suspected presence of a firearm in Jose's truck. Casalnuovo also alerted another officer
19 that Jose was driving back to the residence. Id. ¶¶ 8-9.

20 As Jose got closer to his house, he noticed several patrol cars but did not notice that the 21 cars' emergency lights were activated. Jose Dep. at 91-92. Jose realized that the cops were there
22 for him when he noticed that they were pointing their "pistols and rifles" at him. Jose Dep. at 93.
23 Several police officers told him that they were going to kill him if he moved, and Jose became 24 frozen with fear. Jose Dep. at 111-112.

25 When multiple police vehicles arrived at Jose's residence, Alma and T.H. ran out of the 26 house and towards the parking area where the police activity was occurring. Officers pointed their 27 guns at Alma and T.H. and told them go back inside of the house or they would be shot. Alma
28 and T.H. did not return to the house. Alma testified that she became paralyzed with shock. Jose

Dep. at 122; Alma Dep. at 49-51, 110, 113; T.H. Dep. at 47- 49, 51, 57- 59, 61, 71.

Officers asked Scott, who was in the passenger's seat, if he was Josh. Sargent Boyd and Officer Casalnuovo then ordered Scott to get out of the truck. Casalnuovo Declaration ¶¶ 10-11. Scott exited the truck with his hands raised and walked backward. Scott Dep. at 76, 78-79, 82-83, 85-86, 125-126. Boyd then threw Scott to the ground and pushed his face onto the cement. Alma Dep. at 61, 65, 67, 68. As Boyd handcuffed Scott, Boyd told him to "get down on the ground, you dirty Mexican." Scott Dep. at 126. Scott "just felt pain." Id. at 79-80. Alma then heard Boyd say "damn Mexicans, now you are going back to your country." Alma Dep. at 56. While Scott was on the ground, Scott told Boyd that his dad was "handicapped" and that he should "be careful" with him. Scott Dep. at 125. Alma also told Boyd to be careful with Jose because Jose had just had surgery on his knee. Alma Dep. at 57. When Boyd picked up Scott from the ground, Alma noticed that Scott's face was scraped. Alma Dep. at 70.

Officer Sabido ordered Jose out of the driver's seat. Before Jose exited the car, he reached for his cane because he could not walk without it but Boyd did not allow him to do so. Instead, Boyd pulled Jose out of the car, knocked him onto his knees, pushed his face onto the cement, put his foot on Jose's back, and handcuffed him. T.H. Dep. at 65-66; Alma Dep. at 57. When Alma remembered that Jose could become paralyzed "if his back was hurt," she became hysterical and began to cry. Alma Dep. at 71-72. Jose felt pain while he was on the ground and felt that the police had "beat[en] him up." Jose Dep. at 88, 121, 126-127, 129-132, 137, 139-141, 199-201; Alma Dep. at 65-66, 71-72, 75; T.H. Dep. at 65-55, 68-69. Alma felt that Boyd was the "only one that abused his strength." Alma Dep. at 133.

While Jose was on the ground, he heard the cops say "words about Mexicans" in connection with his family and noticed that the cops were "celebrating the whole thing." Jose Dep. at 120-122. Alma also heard the officers say "[f]inally we are going to fuck this family" and then saw them give each other high fives while laughing. Alma Dep. at 72. Several neighbors witnessed the incident. Jose Dep. at 123-124.

Boyd then pulled Jose up by the arms and took him to a patrol car. Alma noticed that Jose's face was bleeding. Alma Dep. at 72; Casalnuovo Decl. ¶ 12; Jose Dep. at 8, 89-94, 111-

113, 117; Scott Dep. at 64-66, 72, 74.

After Jose was in the police car, Jose and T.H saw the officers, including a woman officer, celebrating by giving each other high fives. Jose Dep. at 146-47; T.H. Dep. at 75-77. T.H. heard Officer Spaletta say “[w]e finally got these fucking dirty Mexicans.” T.H. Dep. at 75-77. Alma felt “humiliated.” Alma Dep. at 72.

The officers placed bags over Jose and Scott’s hands for gunshot-residue testing and transported them to the SRPD. Jose and Scott were arrested for discharging a firearm at an occupied vehicle in violation of California Penal Code Section 246, assault with a deadly weapon in violation of California Penal Code Section 245(a)(1), and fighting in public in violation of California Penal Code Section 415(1). Casalnuovo Decl. ¶¶ 14-17; Jose Dep. at 86, 150, 159; Scott Dep. at 97-98.

The SRPD dispatch then notified the TCPA that Josh was an outstanding suspect. Casalnuovo Decl. ¶ 13. Two TCPA officers located Josh at his place of employment and asked him whether he was Josh, but he refused to answer. The officers told Josh to put his hands on the back of his head. Then, one of the officers hit Scott on the back of his head with handcuffs before handcuffing him. Josh Dep. at 76. Josh did not lose consciousness, bleed, or vomit as a result of being hit on the head, but he suffers from “head pain” caused by having been struck with handcuffs on the top of his head. Josh Dep. at 28, 123. The officers did not say anything to Josh between the time he put his hands on top of his head and when he was handcuffed. One of the officers transported him to the City police department. Josh Dep. at 28, 68-74, 76-80, 86, 123. Josh was arrested for violations of California Penal Code sections 246, 245(a)(1), and 415. Casalnuovo Decl. ¶ 18.

After the arrests, T.H.’s grades worsened significantly and Alma had anxiety attacks and had to go to the emergency room. T.H. Dep. at 37-38; Alma Dep. at 133. Jose has testified that he “had no stress” and “was very happy” before the arrests but now he “feel[s] bad all the time” and remembers the incidents “all the time.” Jose Dep. at 127.

C. Jurisdiction

The Court has jurisdiction over this action under 28 U.S.C. §§ 1331, 1343, and 1367.

II. LEGAL STANDARD

Summary judgment is proper when a “movant shows that there is no genuine dispute as to any material fact and the movant is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a). “A party asserting that a fact cannot be or is genuinely disputed must support the assertion by” citing to depositions, documents, affidavits, or other materials. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(A). A party also may show that such materials “do not establish the absence or presence of a genuine dispute, or that an adverse party cannot produce admissible evidence to support the fact.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c)(1)(B). An issue is “genuine” only if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable fact-finder to find for the non-moving party. Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-49 (1986). A fact is “material” if the fact may affect the outcome of the case. Id. at 248. “In considering a motion for summary judgment, the court may not weigh the evidence or make credibility determinations, and is required to draw all inferences in a light most favorable to the non-moving party.” Freeman v. Arpaio, 125 F.3d 732, 735 (9th Cir. 1997).

Where the party moving for summary judgment would bear the burden of proof at trial, that party bears the initial burden of producing evidence that would entitle it to a directed verdict if uncontroverted at trial. See C.A.R. Transp. Brokerage Co. v. Darden Rests., Inc., 213 F.3d 474, 480 (9th Cir. 2000). Where the party moving for summary judgment would not bear the burden of proof at trial, that party bears the initial burden of either producing evidence that negates an essential element of the non-moving party’s claim, or showing that the non-moving party does not have enough evidence of an essential element to carry its ultimate burden of persuasion at trial. If the moving party satisfies its initial burden of production, then the non-moving party must produce admissible evidence to show that a genuine issue of material fact exists. See Nissan Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Fritz Cos., 210 F.3d 1099, 1102-03 (9th Cir. 2000). The non-moving party must “identify with reasonable particularity the evidence that precludes summary judgment.” Keenan v. Allan, 91 F.3d 1275, 1279 (9th Cir. 1996). Indeed, it is not the duty of the district court to “to scour the record in search of a genuine issue of triable fact.” Id. “A mere scintilla of evidence will not be sufficient to defeat a properly supported motion for summary judgment; rather, the nonmoving party must introduce some significant probative evidence tending to support the complaint.” Summers v. Teichert & Son, Inc., 127 F.3d 1150, 1152 (9th Cir. 1997) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). If the non-moving party fails to make this showing, the moving party is entitled to summary judgment. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986).

III. DISCUSSION

Defendants the City, TCPA, Spaletta, and Shaw move for summary judgment with respect to each of the claims Plaintiffs have asserted against them.³ They argue that summary judgment is appropriate because the uncontroverted evidence establishes that the arrests were supported by ample probable cause, the officers did not use unreasonable force against plaintiffs, there is no evidence of discrimination, and the state law tort claims are unsupportable.

Plaintiffs filed a statement in lieu of an opposition stating that they “are unable to effectively oppose” Defendants’ motion and “can only protest the state of the law.” ECF No. 83. While the Court may not grant Defendants’ motion on the basis that it is unopposed, the Court may grant the motion if Defendants’ submissions are sufficient to support the motion and do not reveal a genuine issue of material fact. See Henry v. Gill Indus., Inc., 983 F.2d 943, 950 (9th Cir. 1993); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 56 advisory committee’s note (“Where the evidentiary matter in support of the motion does not establish the absence of a genuine issue, summary judgment must be denied even if no opposing evidentiary matter is presented.”).

A. Claims Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983

Jose, Scott, and Josh allege that Shaw and Spaletta violated their Fourth and Fourteenth Amendment rights by (1) depriving them of liberty without due process, (2) discriminating against them based on race, and (3) using excessive force against them. SAC ¶¶ 53-54.

Shaw and Spaletta move for summary judgment on this claim, arguing that they are protected from liability under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 by qualified immunity. Defendants further argue that in the event the Court finds that they are not protected by qualified immunity, Plaintiffs cannot meet their burden of proof on these claims in light of the undisputed evidence.

“Section 1983 imposes two essential proof requirements upon a claimant: (1) that a person acting under color of state law committed the conduct at issue, and (2) that the conduct deprived the claimant of some right, privilege, or immunity protected by the Constitution or laws of the United States.” Leer v. Murphy, 844 F.2d 628, 632-33 (9th Cir. 1988).

Qualified immunity is an affirmative defense that “shied[s] an officer from personal liability when an officer reasonably believes that his or her conduct complies with the law.” Pearson v. Callahan, 555 U.S. 223, 244 (2009). “[I]n resolving a motion for summary judgment based on qualified immunity, a court must carefully examine the specific factual allegations against each individual defendant (as viewed in a light most favorable to the plaintiff).” Cunningham v. Gates, 229 F.3d 1271, 1287 (9th Cir. 2000).

1. Deprivation of Liberty without Due Process in Violation of the Fourth Amendment

Jose, Scott, and Josh allege that Shaw and Spaletta deprived them of liberty without due process in violation of the Fourth Amendment because they arrested them without probable cause and kept them in jail for four days even though no charges ultimately were filed against them. SAC ¶¶ 53-54, 65-67.

“When a law enforcement officer asserts qualified immunity from liability for Fourth Amendment violations, the district court must determine whether, in light of clearly established principles governing the conduct in question, the officer objectively could have believed that his conduct was lawful.” Watkins v. City of Oakland, Cal., 145 F.3d 1087, 1092 (9th Cir. 1998) (citation omitted). An arrest is lawful under the Fourth Amendment when it is supported by probable cause. See Beier v. City of Lewiston, 354 F.3d 1058, 1065 (9th Cir. 2004) (“That a police officer may arrest a suspect only if he has probable cause to believe a crime has been committed is a bedrock Fourth Amendment precept.”). “Probable cause exists when under the totality of circumstances known to the arresting officers, a prudent person would have concluded that there was a fair probability that [the defendant] had committed a crime.” Grant v. City of Long Beach, 315 F.3d 1081, 1085 (9th Cir. 2002) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Here, the Court concludes that Shaw and Spaletta have qualified immunity with respect to Plaintiffs' § 1983 claim for deprivation of liberty without due process, because Shaw and Spaletta could have believed that their arrests of Jose, Scott, and Josh were lawful under the totality of the circumstances test. The undisputed facts show that the driver of the Corolla called the police department, identified Jose's vehicle to dispatchers as having been involved in a road rage incident, and told dispatchers that Jose had fired gunshots at his vehicle and that two other men were in Jose's truck at the time Jose allegedly fired the gun shots. Casalnuovo Decl. ¶¶ 2-4. Additionally, prior to the executing the arrests, City police officers spoke with Alma to confirm that Jose owned the truck with the license plate that the driver of the Corolla had identified. In light of this evidence, Shaw and Spaletta had probable cause to believe that Jose, Scott, and Josh had committed a crime. Accordingly, Shaw and Spaletta are entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds with respect to this claim.

2. Racial Discrimination in Violation of the Fourteenth Amendment

Plaintiffs allege that Shaw and Spaletta willfully deprived them of their "right to be free from discrimination based on race, gender or disability" and their "right to equal protection of the law." SAC ¶¶ 54-55. The Court interprets these allegations as pertaining to the racially derogatory comments that Spaletta made after Jose and Scott were arrested by other officers. See T.H. Dep. at 75-77 (testifying that Spaletta said "[w]e finally got these fucking dirty Mexicans" after Jose and Scott were arrested).

"Qualified immunity protects government workers from civil liability if their conduct does not violate clearly established statutory or constitutional rights of which a reasonable person would have known." Cousins v. Lockyer, 568 F.3d 1063, 1069 (9th Cir.2009) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). The question of whether Spaletta and Shaw are entitled to qualified immunity with respect to this claim depends on whether their acts violated a clearly established right under the Fourteenth Amendment.

The Court concludes that Spaletta is titled to qualified immunity with respect to this claim, because racially derogatory statements by police officers, without more, do not rise to the level of an established constitutional violation under the Fourteenth Amendment. See, e.g., Oltarzewski v.

Ruggiero, 830 F.2d 136, 139 (9th Cir. 1987) (“[V]erbal harassment or abuse . . . is not sufficient to state a constitutional deprivation under 42 U.S.C. § 1983”) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted); El-Em Band of Pomo Indians of Sulphur Bank Rancheria v. 49th Dist. Agric. Fair Ass’n, 359 F. Supp. 1044, 1046 (N.D. Cal. 1973) (holding that “[p]aintiffs may have a right to be free from” racially derogatory depictions “but this right is one of the many rights which are not guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States”). Because Spaletta objectively could have believed that her comments were lawful, Spaletta is entitled to summary judgment on qualified immunity grounds with respect to this claim.

The Court also concludes that Shaw is entitled to summary judgment with respect to this claim, as no evidence has been presented to show that he was present at the time Spaletta made the derogatory comments at issue or that he committed any acts that could give rise to a § 1983 claim based on violations of Plaintiffs’ Fourteenth Amendment rights. See Vance v. Peters, 97 F.3d 987, 991 (9th Cir. 1996) (“Section 1983 creates a cause of action based on personal liability and predicated upon fault; thus, liability does not attach unless the individual defendant caused or participated in a constitutional deprivation.”). Accordingly, Shaw’s motion for summary judgment on this claim is granted.

3. Excessive Force in Violation of the Fourth Amendment

Jose, Scott, and Josh allege that Shaw and Spaletta used excessive force when arresting them. SAC ¶¶ 53-55. Specifically, Josh alleges that Shaw struck him on the head with a pair of handcuffs and yanked his arms behind his back before handcuffing him even though Josh did not resist the arrest. Id. ¶ 12.

“When a law enforcement officer asserts qualified immunity from liability for Fourth Amendment violations, the district court must determine whether, in light of clearly established principles governing the conduct in question, the officer objectively could have believed that his conduct was lawful.” Watkins v. City of Oakland, Cal., 145 F.3d 1087, 1092 (9th Cir. 1998).

The “use of excessive force in effecting an arrest is a clearly established violation of the Fourth Amendment[.]” Id. “[T]he test for qualified immunity in excessive force cases is the same as the test on the merits.” Cunningham v. Gates, 229 F.3d 1271, 1288 (9th Cir. 2000) (citation omitted). “Under the Fourth Amendment, police may use only such force as is objectively reasonable under the circumstances.” Id. (citation omitted). “Determining whether force used in making an arrest is excessive or reasonable requires careful attention to the facts and circumstances of each particular case, including the severity of the crime at issue, whether the suspect poses an immediate threat to the safety of the officers or others, and whether he is actively resisting arrest or attempting to evade arrest by flight.” Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). This entails a highly factual inquiry that “nearly always requires a jury to sift through disputed factual contentions, and to draw inferences therefrom.” Santos v. Gates, 287 F.3d 846, 853 (9th Cir. 2002). “Summary judgment or judgment as a matter of law in excessive force cases should be granted sparingly . . . because police misconduct cases almost always turn on a jury’s credibility determinations.” Id. (citation omitted).

The Court concludes that Shaw’s motion for summary judgment on Josh’s excessive force claim must be denied, because Shaw has neither produced evidence to negate an essential element of Josh’s excessive force claim nor shown that Josh does not have enough evidence to prove that the contact at issue was excessive. First, Defendants argue that the hit that Josh suffered was “nothing more than negligence” because he did not bleed or vomit following the incident. The question of whether this contact constitutes excessive force turns on the jury’s credibility determinations. Defendants have produced transcripts of Josh’s deposition, which establishes that Josh continues to suffer from “head pain” caused by having been struck with handcuffs on the top of his head. Josh Dep. at 28, 123. In light of this evidence, a reasonable jury could find that Shaw used excessive force when arresting Josh. Second, Defendants argue that “Plaintiffs’ deposition testimony in fact does not specifically attribute any conduct to Officer Shaw.” Mot. at 11. This argument is insufficient to show that Shaw is entitled to summary judgment on this claim, because the argument does not establish that Josh would not be able to meet his burden of persuasion at trial with respect to the identity of the officer who struck him. See Nissan Fire & Marine Ins. Co. v. Fritz Cos., 210 F.3d 1099, 1102-03 (9th Cir. 2000) (“Where the party moving for summary judgment would not bear the burden of proof at trial, that party bears the initial burden of either producing evidence that negates an essential element of the non-moving party’s claim, or showing that the non-moving party does not have enough evidence of an essential element to carry its ultimate burden of persuasion at trial.”).

On the other hand, the Court concludes that Spaletta is entitled to summary judgment with respect to Plaintiffs’ excessive force claim, as no evidence has been presented showing that she had any physical contact with any of the Plaintiffs. See Alma Depo. at 70, 75, 133; see also Vance v. Peters, 97 F.3d 987, 991 (9th Cir. 1996) (“Section 1983 creates a cause of action based on personal liability and predicated upon fault; thus, liability does not attach unless the individual defendant caused or participated in a constitutional deprivation.”).

B. California Civil Code Section 52.1

Plaintiffs allege that Defendants “interfered” with their rights under the Constitutions of California and the United States “by means of intimidation, coercion, threats and violence.” SAC ¶ 22. The Court interprets this claim as being premised on Shaw and Spaletta’s alleged violations of Plaintiffs’ rights under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments, as discussed above.

California Civil Code Section 52.1 provides a claim for relief “against anyone who interferes, or tries to do so, by threats, intimidation, or coercion, with an individual’s exercise or enjoyment of rights secured by federal or state law.” Jones v. Kmart Corp., 17 Cal.4th 329, 331 (Cal. 1998). Liability under this section, however, “does not extend to all ordinary tort actions because its provisions are limited to threats, intimidation, or coercion that interferes with a constitutional or statutory right.” Venegas v. Cnty. of Los Angeles, 32 Cal. 4th 820, 843 (Cal. 2004).

When a claim under Section 52.1 is premised on the violation of a right guaranteed by the United States Constitution, courts in the Ninth Circuit look to the elements of the constitutional claim to determine whether the Section 52.1 claim is meritorious. See Cameron v. Craig, 713 F.3d 1012, 1022 (9th Cir. 2013) (“[Plaintiff] asserts no California right different from the rights guaranteed under the Fourth Amendment, so the elements of the excessive force claim under § 52.1 are the same as under § 1983.”) claim, which is premised on the same alleged conduct and constitutional deprivations, also must be denied.

Here, Shaw’s summary judgment motion with respect to Josh’s excessive force claim has been denied; accordingly, his motion for summary judgment with respect to the Section 52.1

On the other hand, Spaletta's motion for summary judgment on Plaintiffs' claim for violations of the Fourteenth Amendment has been granted; accordingly, her summary judgment motion with respect to the Section 51.7 claim, which is premised on the same alleged conduct and constitutional deprivations, also must be granted.

C. California Civil Code Section 51.7

Plaintiffs allege that Defendants violated their right under California Civil Code Section 51.7 to be free from violence or intimidation by threat of violence on the basis of their race, color, or ancestry. SAC ¶¶ 25-27. This claim is premised on allegations that the arrests of Jose, Scott, and Josh and the treatment that each of them received during the arrests were motivated by racial animus and a "desire to get [Plaintiffs] out of the country on account of their race." Id. ¶ 26.

Section 51.7 grants the "right to be free from any violence, or intimidation by threat of violence, committed" against "persons or property" based a characteristic such as sex, race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, disability, medical condition, marital status, or sexual orientation. Cal. Civ. Code § 51.7(b), (e).

The Court concludes that Shaw's motion for summary judgment on this claim must be granted, because no evidence has been presented showing that Shaw's actions, namely his alleged use of excessive force against Josh, was motivated by Josh's race, color, or ancestry. See Gomez v. City of Fremont, 730 F. Supp. 2d 1056, 1069 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (granting summary judgment on Section 51.7 claim because the plaintiff "had only a subjective belief, and not any evidence, that [the defendants] were motivated by his ethnicity").

The Court also concludes that Spaletta's motion for summary judgment on this claim must be granted, because there no evidence has been presented showing that Spaletta committed an act of violence or threatened violence against Plaintiffs.

D. Battery

Josh alleges that Shaw used excessive force when arresting him despite his "lack of resistance and complete cooperation" during the arrest. SAC ¶¶ 29-30.

“In order to prevail on a claim of battery against a police officer, the plaintiff bears the burden of proving the officer used unreasonable force.” Munoz v. City of Union City, 16 Cal. Rptr. 3d 521, 539 (Cal. Ct. App. 2004). “Claims that police officers used excessive force in the course of an arrest, investigatory stop or other seizure of a free citizen are analyzed under the reasonableness standard of the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution.” Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Here, Shaw’s motion for summary judgment on this claim fails for the same reasons that his motion for summary judgment on Josh’s § 1983 claim for excessive force fails, as both claims are analyzed under the reasonableness standard of the Fourth Amendment. Accordingly, Shaw’s motion for summary judgment on this claim must be denied.

E. Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress

Plaintiffs allege that Defendants acted with the intent to inflict severe mental, physical, and emotional distress upon them and that they suffered severe emotional distress because of Defendants’ conduct in executing the arrests of Jose, Scott, and Josh. SAC ¶¶ 33-34.

“Under California law, the elements of intentional infliction of emotional distress (“IIED”) are: (1) extreme and outrageous conduct by the defendant with the intention of causing, or reckless disregard of the probability of causing, emotional distress; (2) the plaintiff’s suffering severe or extreme emotional distress; and (3) actual and proximate causation of the emotional distress by defendant’s outrageous conduct.” Sabow v. United States, 93 F.3d 1445, 1454 (9th Cir. 1996) (citation omitted). “In order to be considered outrageous, the conduct must be so extreme as to exceed all bounds of that usually tolerated in a civilized community.” Tekle v. United States, 511 F.3d 839, 855 (9th Cir. 2007) (citation and internal quotation marks omitted). “Where reasonable persons may differ, the trier of fact is to determine whether the conduct has been sufficiently extreme and outrageous to result in liability.” Id. (citation and internal quotation marks omitted).

Shaw and Spaletta move for summary judgment on this claim on the basis that (1) “Jose, Scott and Josh’s arrests were supported by ample probable cause and lawful” and therefore cannot form the basis of any IIED claim; (2) the officers’ acts of pointing guns at Alma and T.H. cannot form the basis for any IIED claim because neither Officer Spaletta nor Officer Shaw pointed their

1 weapons at Alma or T.H; (3) “Spaletta did not use any force against Jose or Scott and she was not
2 present at Josh’s arrest”; and (4) “Spaletta’s alleged comment ‘we got these dirty Mexicans’ and
3 celebrating Jose and Scott’s arrests does not support an IIED claim” because “[t]he evidence fails
4 to show her statement was intended to injure plaintiffs.” Mot. at 22-23.

5 The Court concludes that Shaw’s motion for summary judgment on this claim must be
6 granted because no evidence has been presented showing that Josh or any of the other Plaintiffs
7 suffered severe emotional distress as a result of Shaw’s conduct.

8 On the other hand, the Court concludes that Spaletta’s motion for summary judgment on 9 this claim must be denied. The undisputed facts show that Spaletta made a racially derogatory
10 comment about Plaintiffs’ nationality and race within the view and earshot of the Plaintiffs and 11 several of their neighbors, and that Alma, T.H., and Jose suffered severe emotional distress as a 12 result of this conduct and the arrests that took place at their residence. See T.H. Dep. at 37-38;
13 Alma Dep. at 133; Jose Dep. at 123-24, 127. In light of this evidence, a reasonable juror could 14 conclude that Spaletta’s racially derogatory comment and subsequent celebration of the arrest of 15 Jose and Scott constitutes extreme and outrageous conduct intended to cause Plaintiffs to suffer
16 severe emotional distress. See Tekle v. United States, 511 F.3d 839, 856 (9th Cir. 2007)
17 (reversing grant of summary judgment on claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress
18 because “reasonable minds could differ as to whether the conduct alleged here by [the plaintiff]
19 was sufficiently extreme and outrageous” in part because the plaintiff “testified that an officer
20 made disparaging remarks about Ethiopia” after the officer arrested the plaintiff’s father); Alcorn 21 v. Anbro Engineering, Inc., 86 Cal. Rptr. 88, 89 (Cal. 1970) (holding that a racial insult is an 22 aggravating factor in finding outrageous conduct in situations where the defendant “stand[s] in a 23 position or relation of authority over plaintiff”); Steiner v. Showboat Operating Co., 25 F.3d 1459, 24 1466 (9th Cir. 1994) (“[W]here there is public humiliation it is much more likely that the [IIED]
25 action will lie.”).

26 F. False Arrest or Imprisonment

27 Plaintiffs allege that the arrests of Jose, Scott, and Josh were unlawful because Defendants
28 did not have an arrest warrant or probable cause to arrest them. SAC ¶¶ 64-67.

Shaw and Spaletta argue that they are entitled to summary judgment on this claim because officers cannot be held civilly liable for false imprisonment where the officer, “acting within the scope of his or her authority,” made a “lawful” arrest or “had reasonable cause to believe the arrest was lawful.” Mot. at 23 (citing Cal. Penal Code § 847(b)).

Here, as discussed above, the Court has concluded that Defendants had probable cause to execute the arrests at issue. Because the arrests are lawful, Shaw and Spaletta cannot be held liable for false arrest. Accordingly, their motion for summary judgment on this claim is granted.

G. Immunity under California Government Code Sections 820.2 and 815.2

Defendants Shaw, Spaletta, and the City argue that they are immune from liability for the claims that Plaintiffs have asserted against them. Specifically, they contend that Shaw and Spaletta are immune from Plaintiffs’ claims under California Government Code Section 820.2 and that the City is immune under California Government Code Section 815.2.

1. Section 820.2

The general rule in California is that “public employees are liable for their torts unless a statute provides otherwise.” Barner v. Leeds, 24 Cal. 4th 676, 683 (Cal. 2000). An exception to this rule is contained in California Government Code Section 820.2, which provides absolute immunity for “discretionary acts” performed by public officers and employees. Caldwell v. Montoya, 10 Cal. 4th 972, 989 (Cal. 1995). In determining whether acts are “discretionary” for the purpose of Section 820.2 immunity, California courts have distinguished between “policy” decisions for which immunity is bestowed, and “operational” decisions, for which immunity is not granted. See Barner v. Leeds, 24 Cal. 4th 676, 684-85 (Cal. 2000). Policy decisions are “basic policy decisions [which have] . . . been [expressly] committed to coordinate branches of government, and as to which judicial interference would thus be unseemly.” Id. at 685 (citations and internal quotation marks omitted). Operational decisions, on the other hand, are duties that “are incident to the normal functions of the” public employee. Id. at 688.

Here, the only claims asserted against Shaw and Spaletta that have survived their motions for summary judgment are the claims for excessive force under § 1983 and Section 52.1 and for battery against Shaw, and the claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress against Spaletta.

The Court concludes that Shaw and Spaletta's motions for summary judgment on the ground of Section 820.2 immunity must be denied with respect to these surviving claims because the acts giving rise to those claims are not "policy decisions" to which immunity under Section 820.2 applies. See Blankenhorn v. City of Orange, 485 F.3d 463, 487 (9th Cir. 2007) (holding that Section 820.2 "applies to police officers' discretionary decisions made during arrests. But it has long been established that this provision does not apply to officers who use unreasonable force in making an arrest."); Faurie v. Berkeley Unified Sch. Dist., Case No. 08-cv-0060 TEH, 2008 WL 820682, at *13 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 26, 2008) ("Harassment and intentional infliction of emotional distress through harassment are not 'basic policy decisions' which fall within the scope of § 820.2.").

2. Section 815.2

Plaintiffs allege that the City and County are liable under the doctrine of respondeat superior with respect to the claims they have asserted against Spaletta and Shaw for battery, intentional infliction of emotional distress, and Section 52.1 and Section 51.7 violations. SAC ¶¶ 50-52.

Defendants the City and TCPA move for summary judgment on this claim on the ground that "Plaintiffs' respondeat superior claims against the City for Officer Spaletta's alleged conduct and claims against TCPA for Officer Shaw's alleged conduct fail for the same reasons the claims against the individual officers fail." Mot. at 23.

Section 815.2 provides that "[a] public entity is liable for injury proximately caused by an act or omission of an employee of the public entity within the scope of his employment if the act or omission would, apart from this section, have given rise to a cause of action against that employee or his personal representative." Cal. Gov't Code § 815.2(a).

Here, the City has provided no evidence to show that Shaw or Spaletta acted outside of the scope of their employment with respect to the claims at issue. For this reason, the City can be held liable under Section 815.2 for any claim for which Spaletta and Shaw can be held liable. Accordingly, the City and TCPA's motion for summary judgment on the respondeat superior claim is granted with respect to any claim on which either Spaletta or Shaw have been granted summary judgment, but it is denied with respect to any claim on which Spaletta or Shaw have been denied summary judgment.
